HSBC appoints Dimitri Anghelakis as Global Head of Trust and Fiduciary Services

HSBC today announces the appointment of Dimitri Anghelakis as Global Head of Trust and Fiduciary Services (TFS), effective 17 August 2026.

Dimitri is a highly regarded leader with deep experience across wealth, insurance and business development. He joined HSBC in 2017 as Group Head of Business Development for HSBC Life and Insurance Partnerships, and later served as Chief of Staff for Wealth and Personal Banking and Head of the Office of the Group Chairman. Dimitri will relocate from London to Hong Kong.

He succeeds Brent York, who will retire after more than three decades with HSBC. Brent has made a significant contribution to TFS, its clients and colleagues, and will remain with the business as an adviser until the middle of 2027 to support a smooth transition.

TFS will become part of HSBC Private Bank, with Dimitri reporting to Ida Liu.

TFS supports entrepreneurs, philanthropists and families with specialist services to help preserve wealth, manage successions and plan legacies for future generations.

Ida Liu, Chief Executive Officer, HSBC Private Bank, said: "I'd like to thank Brent for his significant contribution to TFS, its clients and colleagues over more than three decades with HSBC. He leaves a business with deep expertise in supporting families across generations and I'm delighted Dimitri will lead it through its next chapter."

Dimitri Anghelakis, incoming Global Head of Trust and Fiduciary Services, said: "Trust and Fiduciary Services is a specialist business with deep expertise supporting families across generations. I am looking forward to working with the team and further strengthening this important business for our clients."
